Acknowledgments

I would like to thank my thesis co-advisors, Ido Dagan and Eli Shamir. I enjoyed very much their supervision and I learned a lot from both of them although (and because) working with each one of them was a very different experience.

I would like to express my gratitude to several additional individuals who helped with advice and discussion:

Shaike Shen who introduced me to the domain of metaphor and analogy research.

Joachim Buhmann, who was kind to host and guide me during the earlier period of the work; Chapter 4 of this thesis is the result of this collaboration.

Chapter 4 gained also from the guidance of Jan Puzicha regarding the implementation of his approach to similarity.

Naftali Tishby with whom I had several interesting discussions along the various stage of the work.

Yuval Krymolowski who listened to my ideas, including ones that did not make much sense, with a lot of attention and collaborated with me throughout most of the time I worked on this thesis.

Ran Gilad-Bachrach who made valuable comments and suggestions regarding Chapter 5 of the thesis.

Tomáš Gedeon, who read and commented too on Chapter 5.

Ulrike Baldewein and Beata Beigman Klebanov who read the thesis draft and commented on it; many thanks to Beata also for her kind help in printing the version submitted for review.

William Shepard, Tiina Mahlamäki, Ilkka Pyysiainen, Rudi Siebert and Eitan Reich who responded, as experts in the comparative study of religions, to our survey on key-terms used in this field; with most of them I had further illuminating discussions regarding their domain of expertise.

Finally, I would like to thank and to express my love to the most significant individuals in my life: my parents Esther and Tommi Marx, my kids Dor, Ofri and Na'ama and my beloved and supporting wife Daphna.

iv