

WW3

[1.] My plans for getting a good job would be thwarted if I toured Europe with my friends next summer instead of gaining experience as a code monkey.

[1.] If I wanted to elicit memories from my mother, I would suggest we visit her childhood's neighborhood.

[1.] I would like to articulate my grievances about the tediousness and monotony of my mathematics problem sets: let the challenge be in the problems and solutions, not in their sum and multiplication.

[1.] You could undermine an enemy by pretending to be his friend.

[1.] A person who contemplates moving to another country should be prepared to confront general statements about people who contemplate moving to other countries.

[1.] Sam flaunted his expensive new watch by pretending to have lost it, so that he can advertise the fact in all corridors, elevators and toilets of the office.

[1.] I am skeptical that moral progress is more than an oxymoron.

[1.] I would feel chagrin if I had to revise this sentence.

[1.] It is an enigma to me how smart individuals aggregate into silly herds.

[1.] Is it appalling that life is a "but" sitting on a comma.

Nada Amin

March 07, 2002

21F.222 – WW3

namin@mit.edu

[1.]